FAQs

What is the difference between eco-friendly water cremation and flame cremation?

They are the same price, both occur on-site at Radiant Heart, and they do the same thing -- they both result in cremated remains. Where flame cremation uses natural gas and generates CO₂, water cremation is a quiet process that uses water and alkali. With water cremation you receive 20% more cremated remains and they are whiter and softer. 80% of our clients choose water cremation for their pets.

How can I be sure that I will get my pet's cremated remains?

We utilize a strict chain of custody and tracking procedure that includes the use of numbered steel ID tags. Your pet's steel ID tag will stay with them throughout the cremation process (including in the crematorium). After cremation, the tag is returned to you with your pet's cremated remains.

What do you do with communal remains?

Radiant Heart has a special way of honoring pets who are communally cremated. Details may be found at www.radiant-heart.net/communal-cremations.
